RESOLUTION

“Relational Interactions in the Mathematics Classroom: Understanding Mechanisms that Influence Achievement for African American and Latino Students” is a collaborative effort between Evergreen Elementary School and Rutgers University, the goal of this project, to understand mechanisms that impact the mathematics achievement of Latino and African American students.

The Evergreen Elementary School’s core expectation is to have every student attend college. To obtain this vision we continually work on the “Three R’s: Rigor, Relevance and Relationships.” Therefore this project of understanding teacher relationships is of the utmost importance to our school community. We see this grant as furthering our understanding of how to better respect, serve, and build relationships with students as well as improve mathematics instruction so our students can achieve their full potential.

In addition, as a school community we have students and staff members evaluate their ability to uphold these values and identify ways that they can improve and grow through data driven analysis. This represents our dedication to reflect on and learn how to support student learning better. The grant provides an exciting opportunity for us to continue our efforts to use data in improving instruction. Using mCLASS® to analyze student performance further supports this work. Having the project collect data on students’ mathematical thinking and providing it to teachers throughout the year will give teachers an important tool to rethink and adapt instruction to meet the mathematical needs of students.

Finally, the project will provide parent workshops for the community. Mathematics, in particular, is an area that parents have difficulty in supporting students. These workshops will connect the school and home practices so that parents can be involved in the mathematical development of their children. Both the Evergreen Elementary School and Rutgers University are excited to have the opportunity to partner and collaborate on this grant. We see it as critical in understanding how we can better serve our students and in improving the mathematics instruction.

RESOLVED, that the Plainfield Board of Education approves the acceptance of a partnership between Evergreen Elementary School and Rutgers University at no cost to the District.
