8	The new superintendent must know that he/she will be empowered by the board, to make changes and effect change, according to our community's mission statement. That the board is only there to provide oversight and accountability while the superintendent's role is to be the CEO of the school. The needs of the community are clear, we need a school system that ensures each child gets a strong educational foundation. Each child must be taught to read, write and think critically, if they are to succeed in the future.	3/18/2019 10:56 AM
9	Yes. To be effective, the new superintendent will need to lead -- to inspire improvement, track progress, hold staff accountable for carrying out the improvements, and communicate such efforts and progress (or lack of them) to the public. We are looking for a problem solver, someone who embraces challenges, and who knows how to manage people with wisdom and humor.	3/17/2019 5:06 PM
10	Parental inclusion and their voices in this district go unheard and ignored by the current and past boards. Please don't follow that trend. Community forums the welcome interaction with parents, residents and community -based organizations willing to partner with you other than monthly board meetings are important	3/14/2019 12:17 PM
